Bacchylides' 5 Plato's Symposium and Euripides' Alcestis'
Aristotle remarks in his Poetics that Homer was unique among the poets of his time. Many a brave soul did it send hurrying down to Hades and many a hero did it yield a prey to dogs and vultures; so were the counsels of Jove fulfilled from the day on which the son of Atreus, king of men and great Achilles, was born.

The Greeks traditionally assumed that a single poet named Homer posed both the Iliad and the Odyssey, but we have no certain information about who posed these poems or how both the Homeric poems were posed in an oral poetic tradition that preceded the advent of writing.

Homer and the Poetics of Hades offers a new and unique approach to the Iliad and more particularly the Odyssey through an exploration of the role and function of the underworld as a poetic resource permitting an alternative perspective on the epic past.

Being the invisible one popular etymology for a god's underworld poses the greatest challenge for Homer's poetic gaze. In what follows, G explores how that gaze shifts when it moves to the underworld, what constitutes the alternative poetics of Hades.

The gaze of Homer and the light and vision in the Iliad is successful in not simply demonstrating that the Iliadic text is permeated with light imagery but also in analysing the ways in which her chosen examples are integrated into the larger narrative action of the epic and in turn reflect the broader themes of the poem.

In Hades, experimentation with and alteration of important epic forms and values can be pursued with greater freedom. Giving rise to a different kind of poetics, the poet of Hades in the Iliad offers us a glimpse of how this alternative poetics works through the visit of Patroclus shade in Achilles' dream.
